The Philippines in 1900.

Some points that are being made with reference to the Philippine policy by citizens, well meaning, and who are in accord with the President, are being misconstrued into comforting confirmations of their own views by the enemies of the administration. The recent terview by Senator Burrows, who is a supporter of President McKinley, and warm friend, is a case in point. Mr. Burrows did not intend it, but the enemies of the administration find in it comfort and interpret it to confirm their position. What they expect to happen next year, from the effects of the senator's statements, and those of others who are anticipating a lengthy campaign in the Philippines, is that Aguinaldo will maintain his cause until next year because the Americans will be unable to conquer in that time.

These efforts and the "failure," according to the anti's, will be disappointing and the country will elect Bryan along with the anti-expansion platform. Then the Philippines will be abandon-This contention is an assumption that the country is willing to quit, to abandon its sacred obligations and sacrifice its honor.

The record of the United States does not confirm this assumption. It is the very reverse. The American people have never yet repudiated an obligation. Here is an item illustrating in a tion. Here is an item illustrating in a most striking way the truth of this assertion, from the Washington Star:

The greatest test to which the pluck of the American people has ever been put was that when they were divided into two camps against the bloodlest intermedine striffe, a part of the bloodlest intermedine striffe, a part of the bloodlest intermedine striffe, a part of the following the strip of the strip of

This action of the party, which de-clared in national convention that the war was a failure, and demanded that the effort to continue it be abandoned, vas similar to what Bryan's party expects to do in the present case, provid-ing the insurrection continues until next year, which is not probable.

As to this point, it might be imagined, illustration, that Aguinaldo is still fighting when the conventions meet a year hence, and the Americans still contesting to establish their authority in the islands ceded to them by treaty, which the civilized world holds this country responsible. The question arises, will the Democratic convention adopt a platform, along with the nomi-nation of Bryan, declaring the Philippine struggle a failure; that it should not be continued, but abandoned, and that the troops will be withdrawn and the whole territory handed over to Aguinaldo, in case Bryan is elected

This is the logic of the situation, or it would be, in view of all the circum-stances we have detailed; the issue cannot be ignored, because expansion is already a fact, and anti- expansion means reduction—it means to give up we have already secured treaty. We would have to get out of the Philippines, and where would our honor before the world stand?

The Star, above quoted from, aptly zes up the attitude of the Bryan Democracy next year in the campaign, when it says, of the anti-expansion The American people are not s. A campaign waged on the aultters. ussumption that they are would be lost in its inception. The longer we remain in the Philippines, and the greater our sacrifices to remain, the less likely of success this policy of scuttle will be." We take it that the Star means, and it is true, that if the same course is to be pursued next year, in the event of the prolongation of the situation, the Dem-different attitude from this, in view of the extreme construction placed upon a letter recently written by him and grossly exaggerated by the enemies of the administration. He is not the only officer who has been so misrepresented, and we do not believe it will be the last one. One class of the anti-imperialists, the class that writes circulars and pamphlets, is not happy unless it is misconstruing and garbling expressions alleged to come from men at the front in the Philippines.

A Corporation's Experiment. The plan to penalon employes who have reached an advanced age after service, which is to be inaugurated by the Pennsylvania Railroad pany, is receiving much favorable comment, and the working of the scheme is likely to be closely watched by other great corporations. It is an experiment which is voluntary on the part of the management of the road, and is regarded as a generous proposition. was not asked for by the employes, and seems to be prompted by the recognition on the part of the officials that many years of service deserve reward.

Seventy years of age has been fixed upon as the age of compulsory retirement, and the employes who have been in the company's service for thirty years will get benefits of the pension, and relief fund. About $300,000 a year will, it is believed, be necessary to make the pension fund effective on the entire system, though there is no state-ment as to the amount that will be granted to each employe. The officials state that the amount will be in proportion to the length of service and the average wages, which indicate a fair system of distribution.

Incidentally, it may be here mentioned that the Baltimore & Ohio and other roads have had for years, in connec-tion with the management, a system of insurance for the benefit of their characteristics. ployes, and it has proved a good thing in its way. A plan which enables the trainmen, who are in constant danger of accident, to carry insurance, both and accident in the company, at small cost, is, next to the pension proposal, a benevolent institution.

The Washington Post, in speaking of this experiment by the Pennsylvania company, believes that it is an excellent investment, and might prove wise, if adopted by other great corporations of this class. It notes that already the Pennsylvania road is noted for the reliability and intelligence of its em-ployes, "but this further effort to provide for their comfort will secure for it a loyalty which will still further raise the high standard it now enjoys."

the high standard it now enjoys. The Post further says:

It is to be sincerely hoped that the example thus generously displayed will be followed by other railroads throughout the country. In the meantime, however, the Pennsylvania railroad, by giving to its employes the advantages of pension enjoyed by the officers of the army and navy, has shown itself possessed of a soul. Its action will so far toward quieting the growing hostility to corporations.

This is not a bad suggestion for the larger, older and more wealthy rail-larger, older and more wealthy railways. There are very few employes who remain in the service until they are seventy years of age, save possibly those holding clerical positions, and the proportion of those who hold positions for thirty years is fair. The effect of similar action, as suggested by the contemporary above quoted; might be wholesome, where the roads can afford to apply the policy. The outcome of the experiment by the Pennsylvania road cannot be predicted, however; it is only surmised.

How to Get Rid of Flies

National Druggist: The publication of the appeal of our correspondent for something that will_drive away or destroy the swarms of flies that infest his place has brought us several suggestions from correspondents. One, himself a Louisianian, says that many years ago he discovered that flies would not remain in a room with the castor bean (castor oil plant). He also found many dead flies in the neighborhood of the plant. He recommends putting the leaves around the shop and house at several places, "and my word for it." he says, "the flies will leave there instanter." Another from Charleston, S. C., ascribes the same quality to the Japan Illy (Lillium auratum), the presence of which in the shop is sufficient to banish flies." Finally "Old Druggist," writes that he saw "somewhere," he thinks in the National Druggist, the statement that "the true Persian insect powder, if disseminated in the atmosphere of a room, will kill a great many flies and drive away the rest." The plan, which he has followed ever since, is "just before leaving the shop for the night to take an ordinary insect powder gun and holding it at arm's length above the head, to squirt the powder in the air, say half a dozen times. This is all-sufficient to keep the place free from flies." We are much obliged to our correspondents for their information, and hope that it will help our Lafayette friend to get rid of his pests. The information will, no doubt, prove welcome to many others during "ity time, which comes once a year, and stays the rest of the time" in a large portion of our country.

History will repeat itself. To say that it will not, is unjust to the people.

Funston's Vindication.

We trust the Register will make note of the fact that General Funston has announced that he proposes to stay in the Phillippines until the war is ended, and that he will not be mustered out with his regiment at the expiration of its term. This might indicate that Funston is not so much disgusted with the situation in the Phillippines as he was represented to be. Though, being a volunteer, he has a right to come home with his regiment he propuses to gremain and see matters come to a fingment that propuses to gremain and see matters come to a fingment that the consist, and in the curiosity, and in artillery in Manila, contains two nota-

Oranges and lemons mean well wherever they grow, but the best of them owe more to northern intelligence than to a burning sum. Young Tumility's second valuable contribution is polltico-military. It gives his-and a rather novel-appreciation of a much criticised man. "There is," writes this thoughtful private, "a good deal of dis-satisfaction expressed about Gen. Offis. They claim that he cuts no ice, but in my opinion he shovels the snow off the sidewalk all the same. He hasn't got the dash or brilliancy of Lawton, but is a cool, careful, level-headed man, who counts all the chances before he makes a break." One could enaily receive a worse recommendation than that. Here are three more lines from the same authority: "The southern and western men are devils for a rush, but the New York boys get there just the same."

"All but ten of the party were content to turn back from here. The more curious then pressed forward, crossing a flow with only a blackened crust to hold up our weight, while great crevices or red-hot lava yawned, and the soles of our shoes grew hotter as a warning not to tarry, and in all possible but careful haste we reached old lava near the cone and ascended a small peak of an extinct but still hot cone only one hundred feet away from the boiling cone.

"From this elevation we looked through an opening in the side, from which rushed the stream of lava we saw the previous evening.

"The boiling, surging surface in the crater and the eruptions which occurred every few seconds, accompanied by the roar and rumbling sounds, filled the beholders with fear, who were content with a few minutes' gaze, and then sought safer ground more distant.

"Half a mile above this was a large crevice leading up the mountain side emitting much smoke. This we supposed to be the seene of the second fountain a few days previous.
